

A Message of Hope to Infonomics Society Members

We would like to thank all our members for their courage to carry on in the most efficient, fact findings and making sure that they are able to contribute to the knowledge domain during this difficult time. In collective efforts we can do more to build communities of researchers and experts that will eventually create and lead to a world of knowledge enrichment.

We can have an abundance of time in doing things (as many countries around the world are experiencing lockdown) but it is the little time we spend in sharing our knowledge that influences how the next generation will think and where to start from.

We urge our members to take advantage of the COVID-19 lockdown and festive seasons to search for the next knowledge gaps in their research fields that require further investigation. Our members can present the analysis of findings and result outcomes of their research work as speakers, conference papers, journals, book chapters, case studies, workshops and tutorials.
